Project Summary

Japan in the Humanities, Fine and Performing Arts and Beyond: How to Stimulate Interest in Japan among Faculty and Students

The Japan Studies Institute fellowship that I was awarded on Incorporating Japanese Studies into the Undergraduate Curriculum was a valuable experience for me as dean because it enabled me to foresee the breadth and scope of the possibilities in terms of Japanese Studies alone in the context of our current campus efforts to internationalize the curriculum. I will definitely encourage faculty members to apply for future Japanese Studies Institute fellowships and will continue to support Japanese Studies in the many forms it already takes within the College of Humanities, Fine and Performing Arts and strongly promote cooperative ventures with faculty from other colleges within Slippery Rock University.
